MICHAEL ANGELO sat on the scaffolding directly under the ceiling of St. Peter's at Rome.

He wasn't doing small stuff either. He'd been on his back up there for months painting. Mike was pretty near through. He rested a moment, then looking out of the window, said: "Half the world are squirrels and the other half are nuts."

We thought Mike was kidding but since pulling this daffydil stuff we think that Mike cheated a bit by saying only half are nuts. We are certain that ninety-nine per cent are as loose as ashes.

You know that you've pulled daffydils yourself. Don't tell us. Nix on that chatter about being a heavy thinker. Half those deep thinking guys are still trying to figure out how they get the jelly in the jelly doughnut.

But that's alright. Eight's the number. Shoot!

Oh, don't take my word for it, ask the bartender.

Gee-whiz this dog cackles just like a hen. I seen him do it.

Gee, don't take my word for it.

Go ahead now, scamper across the parchment.
